During part of Harold's Army career, he served as a Reserve Drill Sergeant in the 104th Timberwolves Training Division. It was a privilege to work shoulder to shoulder with him training privates at basic training. One time we conducted a Prisoner of War (POW) search class while our platoon of basic trainees were out during one of the Field Training Exercises (FTX). SSG Mayo, at that time, was the primary instructor for that block of instruction. He assembled the platoon in a "U" formation and then ordered them to take a seat on the ground. It was classic what happened after his explanation of the actions taken to initiate and execute a POW search. Immediately after the explanation, a trainee was needed for Harold, the power weight lifter, to conduct a POW search demonstration with before the basic trainees would conduct their own practical exercise. However, the word was out that Drill Sergeant Mayo could bench press 400 lbs and was a weight power lifter. No private in our platoon wanted to be the POW guinea pig demonstrator with him to be forcibly put to the ground like a rag doll and searched. Just as he was about to pick a trainee, there was a cloud of dust that rose up from the dirt on the ground, almost as thick as a popped smoke grenade, made from the trainees scurrying backwards as fast as possible attempting not to be selected as the POW search demonstrator. I wish we were filming. It was classic and will never forget it. The POW class was a success that he taught as all learned the needed actions with no injuries of sprains or broken bones. This memory and others we shared at Fort Knox just before he retired from the Army. We had not seen each other in about 9 years since the Renton, WA Reserve Center days. It sure was great to see him again, talk about humorous times on the trail, and it seemed as though we just saw each other a week ago, not many years. I miss knowing he is not here and unable to look forward to seeing him again shoulder to shoulder in the future. My warmest and sincere prayers to all the family and friends of Harold, the drill sergeant to me, for healing, peace, and tranquility. Drive on, Drill Sergeant Mayo, Drive on! Very Respectfully, SGM (R) Scott Young
