“ I met George on an internet dating sight but we never met up- things when planned just didn't happen. But we emailed almost daily for over 4 years, he would say 5. He knew me, and I knew him and I loved him and imagined a life with him. We text each other on the 20th of December and he said he was dealing with an infection and was on medication that made him loopy. Months ago he said there should be a book about the love of Sherry - how we would forget each other's names but always had that love even though we never met. He made me laugh, he made me happy. I don't think I ever told him that. Told him I loved him though. For some reason since I wasn't hearing from him I prayed that he was okay but something told me to look him up to see if he was still alive. Gosh, I am going to miss him. He was too young and had too much zest for life but when God calls you home- you really can't argue. Love you g. I wasn't done learning from you or being with you on your next adventure. Ever since my dad passed away last year I have been wondering what we are supposed to be praying for when it comes to the dearly departed. We need to raise them up in our hearts for in our hearts they are right here among us. There is a song that goes may those who come behind us find us faithful, so maybe George is saying be faithful, be centered and know a good man knows the way. and George was indeed a good man. s- has he called me. Sherry Zour sherrygz@aol.com as my dad's new cemetery stone says which fits George too- Here is a very good man. George wasn't just a good man - he was a very good man. Oh my gosh- all the sweet lessons he taught me.
